An Australian architect and winner of the 2002 Pritzker Prize, Glenn Murcutt developed his appreciation for vernacular architecture early on. Documenting more than 30 years of his career, the numerous houses and other projects highlighted in this monograph confirm the respect and appreciation for simplicity and small-scale building Murcutt has earned. From the Magney House and Fletcher-Page House to the Arthur and Ivonne Boyd Education Centre and a new mosque for the Newport Islamic Society, all aspects of his work are detailed. A Conversation with Glenn Murcutt, by Sean Godsell, and the essay Feathers of Metal, by Juhani Pallasmaa, complete the volume.

Glenn Mercutt Unfold in the Most Literal Sense

By Sonntag

If you can find a book with better photographs and/or better drawings than this then please buy it. But I'm semi-confident to say that your chance of finding a better book on Glenn Mercutt (the tsar of sustainable architecture) than El Croquis will be as rare as Frank Gehry doing an orthogonal building.

The book contains foldout pages of Mr. Mercutt's hand drawings in large format, which I never seen El Croquis did for any other publication. The drawings are absolutely essential to understand how his architecture work and they are amazingly clear reproductions. Not even the need to mention beautiful photographs, which was El Croquis' trademark.

I adore the book, and learned and stilling learning many things through Mr. Mercutt's work. Although it's not a cheap book to buy, but I consider it a steal if you put a price on its content. So skip a few dinners, or have instinct noodles, it's definitely worth the sacrifice.

Wonderful work in every sense

By Mot

A great compilation of works of the best living architect.

Featuring unpublished oeuvre altogether with the 3 or 4 all time hits that made Murcutt famous within the world.

New pictures, drawings and texts by Murcutt himself explaining each project. And a nice interview by fellow Australian architect Sean Godsell.

In conclusion: an absolute wonder for architects, achitecture students, or simply art-nature-life lovers.

El Croquis 163-164: Glenn Murcutt Feathers Of Metal - Worth it!

By SJT

Very complete, richly illustrated, large format reference including "thinking" and working drawing details that provide great insight into the design process.
