A Great Book Written By A Great Couple!

By A Customer

While living in Salisbury, Maryland, I was befriended by the Howards. One day we were having a rather lofty conversation. All of the sudden they handed me a copy of their book! I was amazed! Even though I'm not a big fan of M. Scott Peck's endless series of theology books, EXPLORING the Road Less Traveled certainly brings his best selling namesake alive!

One can certainly benefit from the Howards' book as an individual reader. However, I believe a lot more can be gained by forming a study group. The Howards' approach is practical, liberal and downright interesting. The book is divided into 11 chapters, ranging from "Dedication to Reality" to "The Courage of Love." With the support of a dynamic study group, there's certainly the potential for a lot of emotional growth, which is the reason the Howards' wrote the book in the first place!

Excellent companion guide

By Tom Airhart

I've used this guide before as a companion guide for Exploring the Road Less Travelled. It is an excellently written companion guide for Peck's book.

Made adult Sunday School class fun, engaging, and informative!

By John Dickey

Last time I taught this class was over 15 years ago, and this study guide brought all back to memory. The group activities and work along handouts for the participants make the reading assignments inter-connect and powerful learning. The book I chose was rated slightly used, with binding issues. Yet, all the pages were there while although loose - but in order and clean pages with no handwriting. I love used books. Thanks.
